GREAT TOBACCO MEETING TO HEAR SAPIRO JUNE 14

Madison County Farmers and Growers Seem To Favor New Plan He Will Explain Here

Aaron Sapiro, marketing expert, will come to Richmond Tuesday, June 14, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon to explain his tobacco marketing plan which is so interesting every farmer in Kentucky and the burley region.

At a meeting of a large number of prominent farmers and big growers here Monday afternoon, a unanimous invitation was extended to him to come to Richmond.

Mr. T. S. Burnam, local member of the state-wide organization committee, presided at the meeting of the tobacco men, explained the high points of the Sapiro plan and urged that the growers of Madison give it a trial. He was followed by James C. Stone, of Lexington, who went into detail about the plan of co-operative marketing of tobacco. Mr. Stone answered many questions from his auditors. He said that he had started in against the plan but had been convinced of its feasibility to fit conditions in Kentucky and is now convinced that it will mean the salvation of the Kentucky tobacco farmer.

Mr. Burnam asked for expressions from others present. Mr. Waller Bennett said that he had been convinced that the plan is worth trying to save the tobacco situation in Kentucky. He pointed out that the whole plan seems to be promoted unselfishly by Judge Bingham and others, and that honesty in its management was one of the fundamental requirements to make it a success. Others who endorsed the plan and desired to have Mr. Sapiro come here were Messrs. Lewis Neale, C. F. Chienault, T. J. Curtis, Jas. Neale, and others.

It was decided to invite him here to speak on June 14th at two o'clock in the afternoon. He is now in North Carolina, telling the tobacco growers there of the advantages of organization in selling of their crops, and will be in Kentucky the week of June 13-18, and Richmond growers consider themselves fortunate to have him here. It is expected that tobacco growers, farmers, and tenants from all over Madison and adjoining counties will be present to hear Mr. Sapiro. Madison will undoubtedly be one of the 22 districts proposed to be established in Kentucky, if 75 per cent of the growers sign the contract to join the organization. Every grower signs for the number of acres he raised last year and pondage that he sent to market. And when 75 per cent of the burley districts has signed up the organization will become effective.

Mr. Stone, who is himself a Madison county native, went into lengthy detail of the plan, and gave his hearers much valuable information. He told how the crop is financed each year, of the selling organization, endorsement of the plan by all bankers who have considered it, and answered fully every question that was asked him.

The farmers plainly wanted to hear more about it from Mr. Sapiro and indications are that he will be greeted by a tremendous crowd when he speaks here on the afternoon of June 14th.

BOOTLEGGERS' TRIP TO PARIS CUT SHORT

Deputy sheriff Sam Bush again demonstrated to the bootleggers that it is going to be hard for them to get by the officers here in Madison county when he went to Fort Estill and captured James McDaniel, who was waiting at the station for the northbound train where he expected to ride over to Bourbon county. He had with him a suit case and upon opening it the deputy found two gallons of white whiskey. He was brought in to Richmond and appeared before Judge Price. He waived the examining trial, and was held over to the grand jury in the sum of $200. He told the officer that he was from the Big Hill section.

FEW LIVE UP TO THIS HIGH IDEAL, THOUGH

(By Associated Press)

Danville, Ky., June 7.—The newspapermen who enter the profession without the training afforded by the universities of the country is seriously handicapped, Keen Johnson, of the University of Kentucky, today declared in an address on "Making Newspaper Men" before the annual mid-summer session of the Kentucky Press Association. He expressed the belief that it is more difficult to make a good newspaperman than it is to make a lawyer, doctor or minister.

The newspaperman, he said, should have a thorough knowledge of the English language, should have a working knowledge of history, finance and economics and should know the mechanics of the newspaper. All of these the School of Journalism is trying to teach in the university.

In speaking of the ideal newspaperman Mr. Johnson asserted that he must "be able to think cogently, analyze accurately and set forth succinctly the results by which conclusions are reached. An editor to whom has been given the gift of discernment, the ability to correlate facts and the analytical mind necessary to deduce from such probable outcome is the prophet of the age as well as crystallizer of public thought. In assuming the position of editor there is placed in his hand the most potent instrument of the age, an instrument that has exposed evil and corruption to the white light of an intelligent public thought, quickened public conscience and led aroused people to action."

The editor, he asserted, should be of judicial temperament and should keep his mind open. He also must have high regard for the ethics of his profession and must be intellectually, mentally and morally without fear.

Mr. Johnson stressed the teaching of English as "the most vital thing in training a newspaperman for men rise in the newspaper world in proportion to their ability to use clear, expressive, forceful English."

He told his auditors that every graduate of the University of Kentucky School of Journalism had made good, but said that he must not be understood as saying that a course in journalism inevitably produced a capable newspaperman. He asserted, though, that he believed that graduates of journalism had a better chance than the man without the university training.

GOOD SADDLE HORSES IN BIG DEMAND

Shelby Harbison, a prominent horseman from Fayette county, was in Richmond court day and took back with him six good saddle horses which he purchased from different parties at prices ranging from $175 to $250 each. Wm. Tremere, of Wilmore, also bought three fancy saddle horses and Smith and Turner four.

Good saddles horses are becoming scarce in the country and there is a steady demand for them.

SCHOOL BOARD ANSWERS QUESTIONS

Propounded By J. Hale Dean and Others Regarding Location of New School

1. Should the location be decided by the Board, or should it be decided by the taxpayers and parents of those who attend the schools?

Answer to Question 1: There is no law in existence providing for a referendum on the location of a school house. To incorporate the question of location in the question submitted, would invalidate the election.

2. Should those who purchased property and built homes because they were close to a public school be now deprived of this benefit without being consulted?

Answer to Questions 2 and 3: No person has an exclusive right to have a school adjoining him or keep schools away from him. The only question that can be possibly presented to a patriotic citizen would be the best location, regardless of individual preferences in the matter.

4. It seems that one of the big questions is that of adequate playgrounds. Could sufficient additional ground be secured adjacent to the Caldwell site at a cost of less than that of abandoning the present site and salvage there on?

Answer to Question 4: At the time the last additions to the public school was made there was violent protest against building this addition on the old grounds on the ground that they were inadequate. And the school board searched the town to get a larger and better location, but was unable to get one except at a prohibitive price, and then at a distance farther than the hill property from the center of Richmond. Additional grounds could be purchased or condemned adjoining the present lot, but it would require several years to perfect titles, and the cost would be in excess of the bond issue asked for.

5. Is the fact that a majority of the pupils who attend the new school will be required to cross Main street two to four times a day a matter of consideration?

Answer to Question 5: This question is based upon a false assumption of fact. Probably three-fourths of the children attending the public schools come down Main street, but even if the assumption was true, it is no reason why a magnificent location should be discarded and an inadequate location used on which to spend $100,000.00, as no school child has ever been injured or contaminated while crossing Main street.

6. Why not be more specific as to the money to be allotted to the colored schools, naming the approximate amount and just what will be done with it. A satisfactory answer to this would probably secure many votes.

Answer to Question 6: The question is specifically answered in the certificate of the School Board to the Board of Council. The first essential is to get a school building erected for the white children of Richmond, who have no school, and to make such improvements in the ground and buildings to the colored school as may be possible. Plans for improving colored schools are being formulated and will be announced.

7. Why not change the method of paying off the bonds and have the heavy payments come in after years when the street bonds are about paid off?

Answer to Question 7: The method of paying off bonds was adopted because it conforms to the street bond issue. The street bond issue is for 20 years and covers practically the same 20 years that the school bond issue covers. The sinking fund provided for street bonds calls for $7,500 a year. The sinking fund for school bonds calls for $4,000 a year, so that the sinking fund created under both ordinances would be exactly the same for the next twenty years. The law limits the period for which bonds shall be issued to 20 years.

BAD ACCIDENT AT NORMAL KITCHEN

Steam Percolator Explodes Injuring Assistant Cook Who May Suffer Loss of Eye.

Wade Ellis, well-known local colored man, was quite seriously injured about the head when a steam percolator exploded at Sullivan Hall where Ellis is employed as assistant cook. He was rushed to the Patti A. Clay Infirmary by Dr. Jimmie, who responded promptly to a call from the dormitory. It is understood that his upper lip and right cheek were lacerated in a number of places and that he will lose his right eye.

From reports it was learned that the steam percolator in the annex dining room began vibrating vigorously just after breakfast and the automatic safety valve began whistling keenly. Mrs. Frankie Kiest, who was in charge of the dining room at the time reported the fact to Mrs. M. A. Lynn, who was at that time in the kitchen of the main building. Mrs. Lynn immediately dispatched a message by one of the houseboys to the engineer at the power plant.

Ellis was employed at Sullivan Hall kitchen and overheard Mrs. Kiest's report to Mrs. Lynn. He immediately went to the dining room and after securing a bucket attempted to drain all the hot water from the percolator. He was cautioned by Walter Fox, chief cook of the annex kitchen, not to take the water out of the tanks. Fox says that he had no more than uttered the warning when the explosion occurred. Because of the nature of the cuts and the loss of blood, it was thought that Ellis was more seriously injured than he is. If complications do not arise, he should pull through with the loss of only one eye.

BOGGS TO INSPECT CAMP KNOX ROAD

Joseph S. Boggs, State Highway Commissioner, today or tomorrow will inspect the road from Louisville to Camp Henry Knox. On arriving in Louisville he is expected to attend the Kentucky Good Roads Convention, which is being held at Louisville today. Mr. Boggs said:

"Regarding the road from Louisville to Camp Knox, I have no statement to make, and will have none until I have inspected the road. I intend to do this either Tuesday or Wednesday."

Work of grading and repairing the two-mile detour, which leads up to the bridge over Salt river, was started Monday, according to J. H. Cahill, contractor. Mr. Cahill said, furthermore, that he had issued instructions to run a 15-ton roller, with a steam scarifier, or the detour to eliminate as many bumps as possible.

Mrs. Stamp Gets Divorce

(By Associated Press)
Louisville, Ky., June 7.—A decree of divorce was granted today to Mrs. Eva Stamp from Walter P. Stamp in jail here charged with the murder in connection with the killing of W. Smith Russell. The grounds upon which the divorce was granted were cruelty.

8. It is noted that the large advertisements appearing in the Daily Register are marked paid for by private subscription. Would it not be better to name just exactly who is supplying this money?

Answer to Question 8: The advertisements paid for in the Richmond Daily Register are paid for by persons interested in schools of Richmond, by donations out of their own pockets, and a list of these may be readily obtained by getting a copy of the organization now supporting bond issue. However, subscriptions will be welcome from any source, providing the person giving has no other motive than to fully advise the voters of the city of Richmond as to the facts.

Received When Burning Trash—
Dr. and Mrs. McDougale Bring
Daughter Home For Burial

Their host of friends will mourn with Dr. and Mrs. E. C. McDougale and the bereaved husband, Dr. Bertram Brown, in the death of Mrs. Brown, which occurred from burns sustained at her home at Quicksand, Breathitt county, Monday morning. She was the only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. McDougale, and was greatly beloved where she had lived so long with her parents and was so popular just before her recent marriage to Dr. Brown.

The body was met at Winchester by Dr. and Mrs. McDougale and brought to their home here. She died about 4 o'clock Monday of burns received when her clothing became ignited while she was burning trash in the yard of her home. She died on a train while enroute to a hospital at Lexington.

Mrs. Brown, according to persons on the scene immediately after the accident, unable to extinguish the flames with her hands, ran into the house, jumped into a bathtub, and attempted to turn on the water. Her hand, however, were so badly burned that she could not turn the faucet.

The Rev. J. L. Cockerham, Presbyterian minister, heard Mrs. Brown's screams, ran into the house and beat out the flames. The woman was badly burned about the head and arms.

Dr. Brown, who is physician for the Mowbray & Robinson Lumber Company, was 20 miles from home on a call when the accident occurred. He hastened home and immediately his wife was placed on a train to be taken to a Lexington hospital. She died as the train reached Malone.

The funeral services will be held at the First Christian church Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Dr. Homer W. Carpenter in charge. The pallbearers will be her classmates at the Model High School: Hart Perry, Spens Turley, Harris Noland, James Park, Jo. Arnold and Luther Powell.

Pueblo, Colorado, June 7.—The known dead from Friday's flood in Pueblo totalled 55 today when three additional bodies were recovered. No burials for several days owing to impassable condition of the roads to the cemeteries. A committee of real estate men met today and estimated the flood damage at fifteen to twenty million dollars.

Wool Prices Are Still Under Last Year's Figures

Reports of wool pool sales from various parts of the state show that the farmer is getting much less for his clip than year ago, at which time the price was almost 50 per cent below the prevailing level of the year before, says the Louisville Times.

Fayette county farmers received around 21 cents a pound for clear white wool. The price for other grades was a little under 15 cents.

A year ago the clear white wool was bringing around 36 and 37 cents a pound, whereas at the corresponding time in 1919 the same grade commanded 70 and 71 cents a pound. The present price represents a decline of approximately 70 per cent from the high level of two years ago.

Dealers report the market is barely steady, but hold out hopes that no further declines will develop. The manufacturers, it is said, are holding off the market. If the farmers could hold their wool for about two years they would benefit considerably, it is claimed.

SAYS RETAILERS ARE NOT PROFITEERING

President of Retail Clothiers' Association Defends Them in Convention Address

(By Associated Press)

Louisville, Ky., June 7—David P. Davis, of Frankfort, addressing the Kentucky Association of Retail Clothiers, in annual session here today, declared that close investigation showed the retailer who had on hand merchandise at high prices had "long since forgotten cost and today is selling these goods at far less than cost, in many instances at even less than replacement prices."

"It is no longer a question of what an article is worth," he added, "but how much we can sell it for."

Louisville, Ky., June 7—Taking issue with the Federal Trade Commission report that recently charged that retailers were holding back prosperity by refusing to reduce prices in keeping with reductions by wholesalers, Ellis Malone, Franklin, Ky., president of the Kentucky Retail Clothiers' Association in his annual address before the convention of the organization here presented figures which he said showed that the retailers were not making undue profits. He declared that the retailers had reduced their prices in keeping with reductions to them.

He warned the retailers that they must not expect as large a volume of business next fall as in past years and asserted that freight rates were too high and a factor in high prices and that organized labor must be willing to take a reduction if living costs are to come down. The present prices of farm products, he asserted, make it impossible for the farmers, who represent 30 to 40 per cent of the buying power of the country, to buy as he would if prices were lower and nearer to what they feel is just. He expressed the belief that the clothing workers would make more money at $30 to $35 a week for a season of 40 to 45 weeks than they would for 25 to 30 weeks at $40 to $45 a week.

Declaring that "a more malicious and unjust accusation has never been brought against any set of men that has been charged against the retail clothiers of this country and so freely circulated through the press," than charges that they are profiteering. He declared that he could not say "why or by whom this propaganda has been put forth." He added, however, that "invested capital on the one hand desires to maintain its dividends and at the same time public sympathy. Organized labor desires to maintain its present scale of wages, based on the high cost of living. The retailer is the natural and convenient target that suits the purpose of both interests."

The figures presented by Mr. Malone to demonstrate that the clothing retailer is not profiteering, he said, are based on a questionnaire he sent out to merchants throughout the state. They show that in the spring of 1920 clothing retailers made from 23 and a fraction to 24 percent gross profit and in the spring of 1921 from 25 and a fraction to 28 percent. For the fall of 1920, he said, the gross profit ranged from 22 and a fraction percent to 24 percent. The report, he added, does not contain every retail clothier in the state but expressed the belief that if all had been reached the result would not have been far different.

The compiled reports from merchants reached by the questionnaire he said "show the following facts: On men's high grade suits for the spring of 1920 the average cost was $40.85. They were sold at an average price of $53.87, which would be 24 per cent gross profit on the sale price and for the fall of 1920 the average wholesale cost on the same grade of suits was $44.20, which were sold at an average price of $58.25, still 24 and a fraction percent gross profit on the sale price; and for the spring of 1921 the same grade of clothing cost an average of $32.60 per suit and was sold at an average of $43.70, which would be 25 and a fraction gross profit on the sale price. On men's medium grade suits for the spring of 1920 this report shows an average cost of $25.65 and sold at an average of $33.37 and at a profit of 23 and a fraction percent of the sale price and for the fall of 1920 an average cost of $23.36 and were sold at an average price of $37.90 and on a basis of 22 and a fraction percent gross profit on the sale price. For the spring of 1921 an average cost of $19.15 and sold at an average price of $26.80 which was a gross profit of 28 per cent on the sale price."

"This," he added, "clearly demonstrates the fact that the clothier has not been a profiteer and the further fact that his reductions in dollars and cents and percentage of reductions have been equal or greater than that of the manufacturer."

"I cannot help but wonder where the Federal Trade Commission got its report when they made the statement that the retailers were retarding prosperity by holding on to higher prices and were not willing to take the adjustment which the wholesaler had taken. Was their report based on intelligent information or were they trying to shift the delayed prosperity of campaign promises to the shoulders of the retailers of the country or was it a little political maneuvering to hold voters of the country in this line until another election has past? I do not believe there is a member of the Kentucky Retail Clothiers' Association or any other intelligent retail clothier in the state, who is not a member, that has not made price reductions as great or greater than has been made by the wholesale houses in their respective lines."

Mr. Malone sketched briefly the situation in agricultural sections. The farmer is not getting proportionately as high prices for his products as he has to pay for other things and cannot and

YOUR HOME TOWN IS MOST IMPORTANT

And You Want To Know What
Your Neighbors Are Doing,
Says Jim Ross

(By Associated Press)

Danville, Ky., June 7.—"A man's home town should be the most important place in the world to him and if it is he wants to know what his neighbors are doing," James M. Ross, managing editor of the Lexington Leader, today told the Kentucky Press Association at its annual midsummer meeting here today. He spoke on the subject "The Importance of Local News."

Mr. Ross led a round table on the subject during which the editors expressed their views.

Mr. Ross, in his talk, expressed the opinion that local news is the most important news in its actual value to the newspaper and community, declaring that "everybody is more concerned with what occurs in their own town than what is going on in a state a thousand miles away."

He said in part: "A man's home town should be the most important place in the world to him and his family. If it is, he wants to know what his neighbors are doing. His only way of learning is by reading a newspaper. Therefore the newspaper must tell him the happenings."

"Members of this body—every one of them—print items in every issue of their paper which to an outsider are not worth using, but to the person or family to which such items refer—to their neighbors, to everybody who knows them, are of much interest."

"If Bill Jones puts some paint on his barn and the paper prints it, Bill Jones will be interested in seeing his name in print; his neighbors will talk about the improvement, while among the advertisers there are those who will read such an item and reach for a date book to have Bill Jones' name in regard to his possibilities as a customer for more paint, for a plow, for an automobile, for a monkey wrench, or possibly as to buying his wife a new dress and so on through the course of all human activity. All over the country, there is a tendency on the part of the most important newspapers to play up local news. Stories are placed on front pages that not worth that important part in the final summing up of news values, but because they will interest people of the town and community. Everybody is more concerned with what occurs in their own town than what is going on in a state a thousand miles away, or in a country three thousand miles distant. Of course, all important news of such states and countries must be given too, to make a complete newspaper, but it is the 'home stuff' that people want."

A Woman Journalist Talks

No local item is too small to be run in the small daily newspaper and subscriptions and advertising are vital to the success of the paper. Miss Annie Poage, of the Ashland Independent told the Kentucky Press Association in an address before the annual midsummer meeting here today. She gave the "Observations of a Woman Journalist."

Miss Poage has worked in both business and editorial departments of newspapers and for a time was an advertising writer for a big Pittsburgh department store.

The modern woman is "just as modest and far more capable and more to be envied" than the woman of the "lavender and old lace type," Miss Poage told the editors, in one of her "observations." Since the granting of the ballot to women the race between the men and women for business supremacy is to the "swift," she added.

"The wisest heads have learned that they must get local news or get out of the field. Your home town and what your men and women are doing worth while and your own state should be more interesting than to read about what the people are doing over in South Africa."

The small city daily should feature local and not telegraphic news.

The man who can get a story but cannot write it is of as great value to a newspaper as a man who can write.

The proof reader can make the editor appear either educated or uneducated. He is as important as the city editor.

The headline writer should be clear and concise and must keep the busy reader in mind.

Advertising is necessary for without advertising the newspaper cannot exist, but without news advertising cannot be sold. Physicians soon will be advertising.

Miss Poage told of her start in the newspaper business, how her first article, written long before she took up the work, was written as a result of a "talking to" given to her by her father for stopping to chat in front of the city hall, where a number of male gossips "hung out." The article informed the city officials that if they would take a hoe and get busy cutting the weeds from the streets instead of sitting about gossiping they would be doing the city more good. She also told of her experience in getting in the small items for the personal columns of the Ashland paper and how eventually thru the continued use of local news the advantages of the big city daily were overcome.

Commission dragged a seine 200 feet long and 12 feet deep thru the waters of No. 1 reservoir. The work was done in order to remove the fish from the pool which is crowded to another one not so completely stocked.

More than 10,000 fish of various kinds and a motley collection of turtles hard-shelled and soft-shelled as well as a liberal sprinkling of frogs were secured.

A bass and three channel cats were taken by Dr. R. S. Tuttle to be used for breeding purposes by the commission. It was estimated last night that more than 1,000 pounds of carp were given away.
